The Second Bull Run Battlefield-Description of the Ground-The Monnment.

Washington, Nov. 1865. Although the second Bull Run battle cas three times longer, and was perhaps ore perfinaciously contested by our force vet it resulted not much better, and its effect upon the country was quite as awfully and damagingly depressing as the first Like the first, it failed, unquestionably from the existence of traitors in our own

Circumstances seem to indicate that ou forces, before the second battle, as before the first, crossed the Ill-omened Bull Run river or rivolet, at Sadley's Mills The fighting evidently began a little, perhaps half a mile, west and south of where it be gan really in earnest in the first. This was on a line of railroad then in process of building, which was to run from Alexandria direct to Gainesville, and the grading of which was complete at the time of the buttle. The possession of a deep cut in this railroad bed seems to have been the ncitement to a desperate fight. It was in the woods, and the trees are thickly marked with musket balls and with the destructive effects of cannon shot or shell. In this ent are still remaining many belts, cancens, shoes and hoots; whils up on the ank on either side, scattered all around, are the grave mounds of those who lost their lives in this fight. The dead seem to have been buried where and as they fell. A little dirt was scooped up on each side of the body of each dead soldier and brown upon it and that constituted the burial. Aye, these brave boys may respond readily to the first trumpet note on he morning of the resurrection! On the irst field, so far as our observation extended, there are no graves now discern-ible. Among all those here in the woodor up on the hill in the field where the monument stands, nothing above any grave denoted who slumbers in it, save in

About half a mile down the railroad bed, in a southerly course, is the monu-ment of this second field. This monument is very similar to the first, described. in a former letter, except in two respects. There are no small pedestals at the corner of the main one, and on the steps of the base, or on each rise, there is a row of alternating small shot and shell set in plaster. Some persons with wandal pre-

GROVETON, AUGUST 28TH, 29TH, AND 30TH, 1862. I have said that circumstances on the second field seemed to indicate that our army came across Bull Run where it did in the first one. This, however, was not the fact. General Pope, I think, fell back from the Ruppahannock, followed by the the robel army. As the two approached the old Bull Run field, it became apparent that the rehel General was anxious to avail sumself of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the pressing of the pressing of the pressing of the first field for the pressing of the nimself of the prestige of the first field for the second fray. General Pope deternined to prevent it, and did, and the sec-nd battle was fought on a field contigus to the first and parallel with it. There is something more to be seen on be second field than on the first to mark as a past scene of human carnage. Be

Cost of Manufacturing a Magazine. A notable feature in American literature is the magazines. The Harpers, of New York, give some interesting statistics concerning their well-known monthly.
Twenty and a quarter millions of copies have been printed. The separate sheets would cover a path two and a half feet broad and 4,400 miles long. They would arpet almost 16,000 acres, and each sheet s printed on both sides, so they contain ,000 acres of printing. The plates for a single number of the magazine cost about $3,000. This includes the sums paid to editors, contributors, artists, engravers, compositors and electrotypers for one num-ber. If only 1,000 were printed, this Five dollars would be as little as any or number would cost to the buyer; and a this rate the aggregate profit upon 1,000 copies would not be enough to warrant any one to produce them. If 10,000 copies were printed, this cost would be reduced to thirty cents a copy. Then each copy of the magazine might be sold for a dollar. But if 100,000 copies are printed from the same plates, this cost of $3,000 amounts to only three cents on each copy, and the magazine can be produced at its present
